Boundaries Impact The Teacher/Student Relationship?

Teacher Competencies:

Collaboration
and Community Engagement

“Develop positive and supportive connections
— with students and colleagues, building professional learning networks”

“Practise effective communication appropriate to the context and audience, enabling responsiveness to diversities of learners”

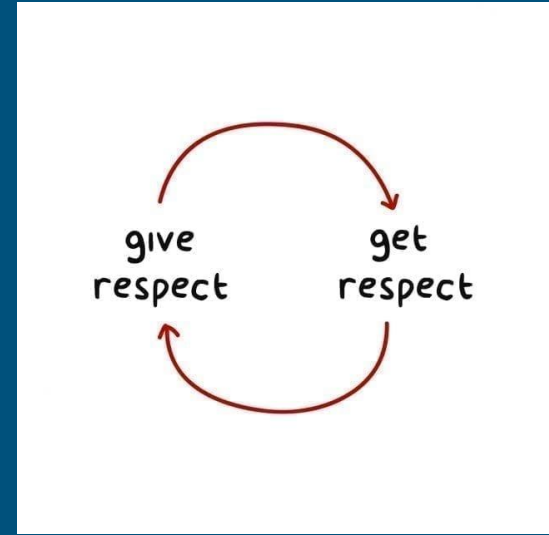

“Practice respect for all learners from all cultures, including, specifically, Indigenous learners”

Why This Question?

My Findings

- Want students to learn to be good people, not just learning subject material
 - Stay firm and be consistent, but listen and be open to student critique

What I Didn't Think Of Before

- Some classes need more boundaries than others
- Students can have individual boundaries

Adaptability

Benefits of Strong Teacher/Student Relationship

More engaged/willing to learn

Makes students feel safe

Why Is This Topic Relevant?

The teacher/student relationship is one of the most important aspects of being a teacher!

Further Exploration Into My Question:

- What happens if you do not set clear boundaries from the beginning?
- What are the most important boundaries? Why?
- When is it appropriate to introduce new boundaries?

Thank you!
